Virtual Customer Service: How To Train Frontline Employees

Wednesday, August 5 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

This webinar identifies key online interactions that can enhance or detract from excellent service delivery. From video conferencing to email interactions, employees will be expected to build relationships and support customer needs. Not all employees are prepared for this, especially if most of their online interactions have been personal and casual. We will examine the etiquette associated with video conferencing, phone, and email communications. We will discuss ways to ensure your employees have the information and resources they need for efficient interactions and identify ways to document and recognize those interactions to support ongoing excellence.

Objectives:

- Learn the elements of virtual customer service that will ensure positive, successful interactions
- Identify novel training needs and learn how to meet them
- Identify ways to document interactions
- Identify ways to recognize and encourage positive interactions

Who Should Attend?

- Administration
- Enrollment Management
- Faculty
- Human Resources
- Online Learning
- Student Services/Affairs
- Any educator interested in learning more about remote customer service

Virtual Customer Service: How To Train Frontline Employees

Wednesday, August 5 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Speaker(s)

I do not think there is anything more important right now than building and maintaining relationships with our students and community, regardless of distancing measures. Every interaction can communicate to them our absolute commitment to their success. It would be tragic to let something like poor etiquette or inconsistent service harm that relationship.
